Dear Colleagues,

On behalf of the Scientific and Organising Committee, it is our great pleasure to welcome you to the fifth International Conference on Evidence-based Policy in Long-term Care.

This is the first time that the ILPN conference has been hosted outside of London. It is a joint effort of the ILPN team at LSE and the local organising team from the WU, the Vienna University of Economics and Business, Austria. For this conference, we have had a record number of abstract submissions covering all key long-term care policy topics, and representing a broad range of methodological and analytical perspectives. We are confident this edition of the ILPN conference offers inspiring pieces of international research and will generate truly stimulating exchanges of ideas and experiences about all aspects of long-term care policy.

We have listened to your feedback from previous conferences, and have tried hard to provide more opportunities for networking and for presenting papers. We have organised the Welcome Reception at the Library and Learning Centre of the WU Campus designed by the famous Iraqi-British architect Zara Hadid. We would like to highlight in particular the conference dinner on Tuesday evening at the Dome Hall of the Natural History Museum. We hope that you will enjoy the modern surroundings of the WU Campus, and of course that you will take the opportunity to experience the wonderful city that is Vienna (voted the best city to live in for the ninth year running in the Mercer Quality of Living survey!).

Sadly, the last two years have seen the passing of our colleague and great ILPN supporter Josh Wiener, based at RTI International, United States. A brilliant and hugely respected researcher with encyclopaedic knowledge of long-term care systems across the globe, Josh was a great friend of ILPN and supported its development since its inception. We would like therefore to remember him through a new Josh Wiener Award for the best ILPN conference presentation, to be awarded at this and subsequent ILPN conferences (see page 10 for further details). We hope that you will help us make this award a success by telling us about those presentations that you found truly inspiring.

As always, we are very keen to get your views about how to develop and improve future ILPN activities so that they are most useful to you – so do not hesitate to contact us with your suggestions and ideas; and if you are not an ILPN member, do join today!

We hope you have a really stimulating and enjoyable time in Vienna!

Getting around

The ILPN conference 2018 is hosted by WU Vienna. All plenary talks, sessions and receptions are located at the WU campus. However, the conference dinner will take place in the city center and requires transportation (see also pages 7–8 on the conference dinner).

We have organized a special price for public transport. Buy your ticket online before you travel:
https://shop.wienerlinien.at/index.php/special_customer/2230/join/htC0crzmss

- You can choose from a one-day up to a four-day Congress Pass.
- The Congress Pass is ideal for those going to the Conference Dinner (direct connection with U2). Avoid the queues at the ticket machines and buy a one-day ticket before you travel.
- For those coming from the airport, staying at a hotel in the city center or extending their stay in Vienna, a multi-day pass could be an option.

There is an app provided by the Vienna public transport service called “WienMobil” available in both German and English – it offers route planning, maps, and services for public transport, bike sharing (City Bike) as well as walking directions and it is available on the Apple store and the Google Play store.

City Bike is also an option for those who prefer to see the city by bike. After paying a EUR 1,- registration fee when signing up online, you can use your bankcard to rent a bike around the city – and it’s free if you return your bike within an hour to any city bike location.

There is a city bike location on the WU campus as well as at the ‘Messe-Prater’ and ‘Krieau’ metro entrances.

Visit <https://www.citybikewien.at/en/> for more info.

The bottle in your conference bag

Stay hydrated and cool during the conference! Don’t worry about finding a store and don’t bother with plastic, just use the reusable water bottle you can find in your conference bag.

The tap water in Vienna is not only safe to drink, it is high-quality alpine water from the Austrian mountains.

Save money AND the environment!

Social Events

ILPN Registration and Informal Welcome Event at “Zur grünen Hütte”

Sunday 9 September 2018 (16:00-18:30) Address: Prater 196, 1020 Wien

Reaching “Zur grünen Hütte” (to the “Green Hut” restaurant) from the hotels close to the WU Campus (blue circles on the map), i.e. Motel One and the Austria Trend Hotel is quite direct and straightforward. From the Marriott, it is a short walk through the WU campus to reach the restaurant.

For those coming from the city, exit from the U2 stop ‘Messe Prater’ and from the exit at Ausstellungsstraße the ‘Grüne Hütte’ is just around the corner (hint: do not follow the signs toward the Messe or WU campus to reach the Grüne Hütte, it is closest to the other exit at the station). Choose the garden entrance to the restaurant.

Welcome Reception

Monday 10 September (18:00–20:00). The Welcome Reception will take place at the WU, Library and Learning Centre (LC), Forum

Relax, have a (non-alcoholic) drink and a chat with other participants. Test your wine knowledge in a guessing game to see if you can guess correctly from two Austrian wine varieties.

Conference Dinner

Tuesday 11 September (19:00–23:00) at the Natural History Museum, Kuppelsaal (Dome Hall)

Address: Maria-Theresien-Platz, 1010 Vienna

We will be having dinner in the Dome Hall of the Natural History Museum on Tuesday evening. To get to the museum on time, leave the WU campus roughly around 18:15. There is a direct public transport connection from the university to the museum:

- From ‘Messe-Prater’ station (or the ‘Krieau’ station) near the WU, take the metro U2 (in the direction of ‘Karlsplatz’) six stops to ‘Volkstheater’.
- When you arrive at ‘Volkstheater’ walk along the platform in the direction of travel. Towards the front on the right-hand side, there is an escalator going up which leads to the corner where the theater is located (the building in the upper left corner on the map below).
- Cross to the opposite corner: the Natural History Museum is one of the two matching museums, and is the one closer to the station.

Conference Dinner programme

19:00 Welcome drinks and the chance to catch a glimpse of the museum’s famous Paleolithic Venus figurines

20:00 Dinner buffet

21:30 Roof-Top Tours (optional): Interesting facts about the Natural History Museum and wonderful views over Vienna city centre at night

As places are limited to those who have registered for dinner, please show your Conference Dinner Ticket at the entrance to the museum.

If you have not registered for dinner but want to join and have bought a conference pass for three days or Tuesday only, please speak to one of our conference WU staff. We may have one or two last minute cancellations.

Farewell Reception

Wednesday 12 September, WU Library and Learning Centre (LC), Clubraum

The Farewell Reception will be held on the first floor of the Learning Center (LC) in the "Clubraum" at 13:15 – please see map on page 5 for details.

The WU, Vienna University of Economics and Business

The WU, Vienna University of Economics and Business, is one of the EU's largest educational institutions for business and economics, business law, and social sciences. Research and teaching at the WU have a clear international orientation and profile. Over a quarter of the faculty, as well as our student body, are international. Our university offers a range of study programs in English and maintains partnerships with 240 universities around the globe. WU obtained major international accreditations (EQUIS, AACSB, AMBA) and is successfully engaged in international research networks and projects.

In September 2013, the university relocated to the new WU Campus, between the exhibition grounds ("Messe Wien") and the expansive Prater Park. For details, see <http://www.wu.ac.at/campus/en/>

Department of Socioeconomics/Institute for Social Policy

WU's 11 Departments are mostly organized according to academic (sub)disciplines in economics, business and business law. However, in 2010 the Department of Socioeconomics was established to promote multidisciplinary and interdisciplinary approaches to research and teaching. The department places specific emphasis on global challenges and sustainability transformations. Population aging as a major policy challenge is firmly anchored in its research and teaching agendas. For details, see <https://www.wu.ac.at/en/departments-socioeconomics/research/>

Within the Department of Socioeconomics, the Institute for Social Policy has been conducting research on health and long-term care systems, care migration and the mixed provision of long-term care services for nearly three decades. For details, see <https://www.wu.ac.at/en/sozialpolitik/>

Research Institute for Economics of Aging

WU's 16 Research Institutes constitute a further platform for collaborative research into crosscutting issues. They form independent organizational units with a mission to engage in international competitively funded research.

The Research Institute for Economics of Aging was founded in 2006 to contribute to the understanding of socio-economic living conditions of older people and economic challenges of aging societies. For several years, research projects have been conducted on outcome measurement of long-term care, focusing on quality-of-life effects using ASCOT, projections of long-term care costs, care service provision and reconciling work and family care. National and international projects also deal with the effects of assistive technologies on older people's well-being. Work by the Research Institute for Economics of Aging has been partially supported by Fonds Soziales Wien (Vienna Social Fund). For details, see <https://www.wu.ac.at/en/altersoeconomie>

Josh Wiener Award for Best ILPN Conference Presentation

To celebrate the late Josh Wiener's outstanding contributions to the field of long-term care research and his support to ILPN, we are introducing the Josh Wiener Award for Best ILPN Conference Presentation. The award will honour the most inspiring presentation at the conference, focusing on the novelty of the research, its academic rigour and the quality of the delivery.

The winner will be selected by conference participants, who will have the opportunity to identify the three presentations they enjoyed the most. The presentation receiving the most votes will be announced during the Farewell Reception on Wednesday 12 September and the speaker will receive an iPad and complementary registration to the next ILPN conference in 2020.

All conference participants will receive an email with the link to the online voting facility.

Full details about the award can be found at:

<https://www.ilpnetwork.org/ilpn-conference-2018/josh-wiener-award/>.

Please help us make a success of the Josh Wiener Best Presentation Award by telling us about those presentations that you really enjoyed!

Plenary Talk, Monday 10 September 11:00–12:15

Private and public provision of elder care: Can we find an equitable balance?

Douglas A. Wolf

Professor of Public Administration and International Affairs, Syracuse University, United States

It is common to encounter the view that 'family caregiving' is both prominent and societally important, is both beneficial and costly, and also that its future is threatened by demographic change and constraints on public resources. It is also common to encounter the view that the problematic aspects of family caregiving provide a rationale for new, or improved, or at least expanded, collective roles in the provision and support of elder care.

In virtually all of the more-developed countries of the world, a system of publicly-provided care coexists with various patterns of family-provided care. This remains true even in countries that have gone far towards universality in their public long-term care (LTC) systems, among them Germany, Japan, and Korea.

I will compare selected features of these countries' LTC systems, and will also include comparisons to the U.S., a country with no single, or at least no systematic, 'system' of publicly-supported LTC services, as well as to selected additional countries.

A comparison of how these countries' systems are designed, and how they work in practice, will lead to broader considerations of program design, with implications for how these systems might work in principle. I consider a number of key actors in this program-design problem, including today's elders, today's younger population, people distinguished by their family situation, and the present versus the future populations.

Even the nominally 'universal' public systems currently in existence depart from complete universality through their use of various rationing devices, and each such device has the potential to alter the mix of family- and publicly-provided services. Another important design issue is the degree to which we adopt program features that support 'family caregiving' rather than 'family caregivers.'

With the numerous interests – sometimes complementary, and sometimes competing – represented by the various actors as well as the numerous program-design features in use, mixed systems of family- and publicly-provided elder care seem to be inevitable. However, the equity implications of different program-design decisions differ in important ways.

Biography

Douglas Wolf is a demographer, policy analyst, and gerontological researcher who studies the economic, demographic, and social aspects of aging, disability, and long-term care. His professional experience includes an appointment as an economist in the Office of Income Security Policy in the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (now DHHS), several years at the Urban Institute culminating in a position as Director of its Population Studies Center, and several years at Syracuse University, where he is currently Professor of Public Administration and International Affairs, Gerald B. Cramer Professor of Aging Studies, and Associate Director of the University's Aging Studies Institute. He also spent two years as a Research Scholar at the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis in Laxenburg, Austria, where he worked with its Population Program.

Plenary Talk, Tuesday 11 September 13:30–14:30

Toward 'fit-for-purpose' policy on long-term care in sub-Saharan Africa? Key challenges, approaches and opportunities

Isabella Aboderin

Senior Research Scientist and Head of the Aging and Development Unit at the African Population and Health Research Center (APHRC), Kenya

Sub-Saharan African (SSA) countries have expressed a global-level commitment to the development of sustainable and equitable long-term care systems – and, thus, to ensuring the rights of, and equitable conditions for carers, and access to person-centered and integrated care for all who need it. The pursuit of these imperatives demands an expansion of organized LTC provision and support services – especially given evidence, albeit limited, of major faults in current family-based LTC provision, and inequities in the organized LTC provision that is expanding in response to rising need. Yet, policy- and scientific debate on forging required LTC systems for SSA countries remains in its infancy – and no fit-for-purpose policy architecture exists.

This plenary talk seeks to offer an analysis of the nature- and key drivers of the policy impasse, and of particular approaches that are needed to overcome it. The presentation, first, locates specific gaps in the extent to, and ways in which existing regional and national policy frames on aging or care address the key LTC imperatives. Drawing on a 'thinking and working politically' approach, the analysis then identifies (i) a set of political factors that act as likely key 'blockers' to addressing the policy gaps and (ii) foci and promising entry points for research and advocacy to address the blocks. Reflections on implications for North-South and South-South collaboration on LTC are concluded in the talk.

Biography

Dr Isabella Aboderin is a Senior Research Scientist and Head of the Aging and Development Unit at the African Population and Health Research Center (APHRC) in Nairobi, Kenya. She holds additional positions as a Visiting Associate Professor of Gerontology at the University of Southampton, UK and as an Extraordinary Professor at North West University, South Africa. Building on more than 15 years of work on aging in sub-Saharan Africa (SSA), Isabella's current research and policy engagement centers on (i) illuminating the nexus between issues of older populations and core development agendas in SSA – with a focus on long-term care systems, older adults' socio-economic and intergenerational roles and impacts, aging in urban slums and the nature of- and inequalities in, later life well-being and (ii) developing capacity for African gerontology and geriatrics. Among other roles, Isabella serves as Regional Chair for Africa of the International Association of Gerontology and Geriatrics (IAGG); Technical Advisor to the Global Commission on Aging in Developing Countries; Member of the African Commission on Human and People's Rights Working Group on the Rights of Older Persons, Global Ambassador for HelpAge International and Trustee on the board of the United Nations International Institute on Ageing (INIA) and, incoming, the Population Reference Bureau (PRB).

The International Long-term care Policy Network is a network of researchers, policy-makers and industry with the aim to promote the global exchange of evidence and knowledge on LTC policy.

Launched in September 2010, ILPN aims to:

1. Strengthen links between researchers, policy-makers and long-term care industry;
2. Promote sharing of the existing evidence base on LTC policy and practice;
3. Foster research collaborations to develop new evidence in areas where knowledge gaps exist in LTC;
4. Promote international comparative policy analysis towards evidence-based policy making.
